Make a clear introduction

Introduce yourself and your topic.

Tell your audience why this topic matters.

Preview the two ideas you will share.

Know your audience

Think about what your listeners already know.

Choose one question your talk will answer.

Use familiar words and explain new terms.

Build one main point

State your point in one sentence.

Give a concrete example from everyday life.

Explain how your example supports your point.

Connect your ideas

Finish one thought before starting the next.

Use transitions such as: Here is an example.

Pause briefly so listeners can follow.

Leave a clear takeaway

Repeat the idea you want listeners to remember.

Suggest one practical next step.

Thank your audience and invite a question.